

Bosnia and the Destruction of Cultural Heritage

Helen Walasek

With contributions from Richard Carlton, Amra Hadžimuhamedović, Valery Perry, Tina Wik

Ashgate, £80

ISBN 978-1409437048

This detailed account is the first comprehensive overview of the destruction of cultural heritage in Bosnia during the 1992-1995 war. It documents the loss of built heritage, as well as portable heritage from libraries, museums, and archives. It also analyses the restoration and rebuilding during the first decade of post-war recovery. Surveys and case studies validate the conclusions reached in this well-written account. An important study, it is especially relevant for those examining the long-term effects of destruction to cultural heritage during conflict – something that can be applied to other parts of the world today.

This article appeared in issue 73 of Current World Archaeology. Click here to subscribe.

